Necessity Of Keeping Nazi Forces Out Of West Seen By Authorities

WASHINGTON, June 18—In a surprising and startling move to make the American navy by far the most powerful the world has ever seen, Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, today urged congress to approve a 70 percent increase in the navy's fighting strength at a cost of $4,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, June 18—The administration today eagerly awaited news of the German peace terms to be offered France, its own immediate policies depending on whether there is to be an armistice or a continuance of fighting between France and the Reich.

Already the prospect of France's withdrawal from the war, leaving Britain to fight alone, has suddenly stimulated American defense activity. Congress yesterday passed a bill enlarging the standing army to 400,000 men, and adopted a resolution warning Germany, in effect, to keep off French possessions in the Western World. Today congress is preparing to consider a new $1,200,000,000 naval bill, which would put 84 more warships on the seas.

Although yesterday American officials took it for granted that France soon would be out of the war, late reports last night left some doubt. Officials attached importance to the statement of the French foreign minister that his country would not accept disgraceful peace terms. And reports from Berlin that Germany probably would demand complete surrender prompted a belief that the French might find Adolf Hitler's terms so onerous that they might try to fight on, either from a capital in North Africa, or by accepting the British offer of a unified Anglo-French government.

Drastic Measures Hinted

If France is to surrender, some Washington quarters believe that the United States may take immediate action.

Washington Circles Hint Dark Horse May Be Put At Head Of Ticket

WASHINGTON, June 18—Fresh talk of the Republicans nominating a "dark horse" swept the capitol today despite rumors that the forces of Ohio Senator Robert A. Taft and New York Racket-Buster Thomas E. Dewey will reach an agreement before a ballot is taken at the Philadelphia convention.

Republican leaders, meanwhile, predicted that the capitulation of France would end President Roosevelt's third term ambitions. Some Republicans declared that the President would not seek a third term while others said he might but would face certain defeat in November. They argued that the President had staked his foreign policy too heavily on an Anglo-French victory.

The Taft-Dewey alliance rumors circulated without sanction from either candidate. In fact, certain Taft and Dewey followers denied the rumors, each side asserting that their favorite will be nominated without help from his rival. The rumors appeared to be based on the fact that Taft and Dewey together are expected to control more than 700 delegates, more than enough to nominate the 1940 Republican ticket.

In the talk of a "dark horse" compromise, there was no agreement.

MR. GAYDA SAYS SOME WESTERN AREAS FOR AXIS

ROME, June 18 — "Spiritual support" of the axis powers by "not a small part of South America" was cited today by Virginia Gayda, authoritative press spokesman for Premier Mussolini.

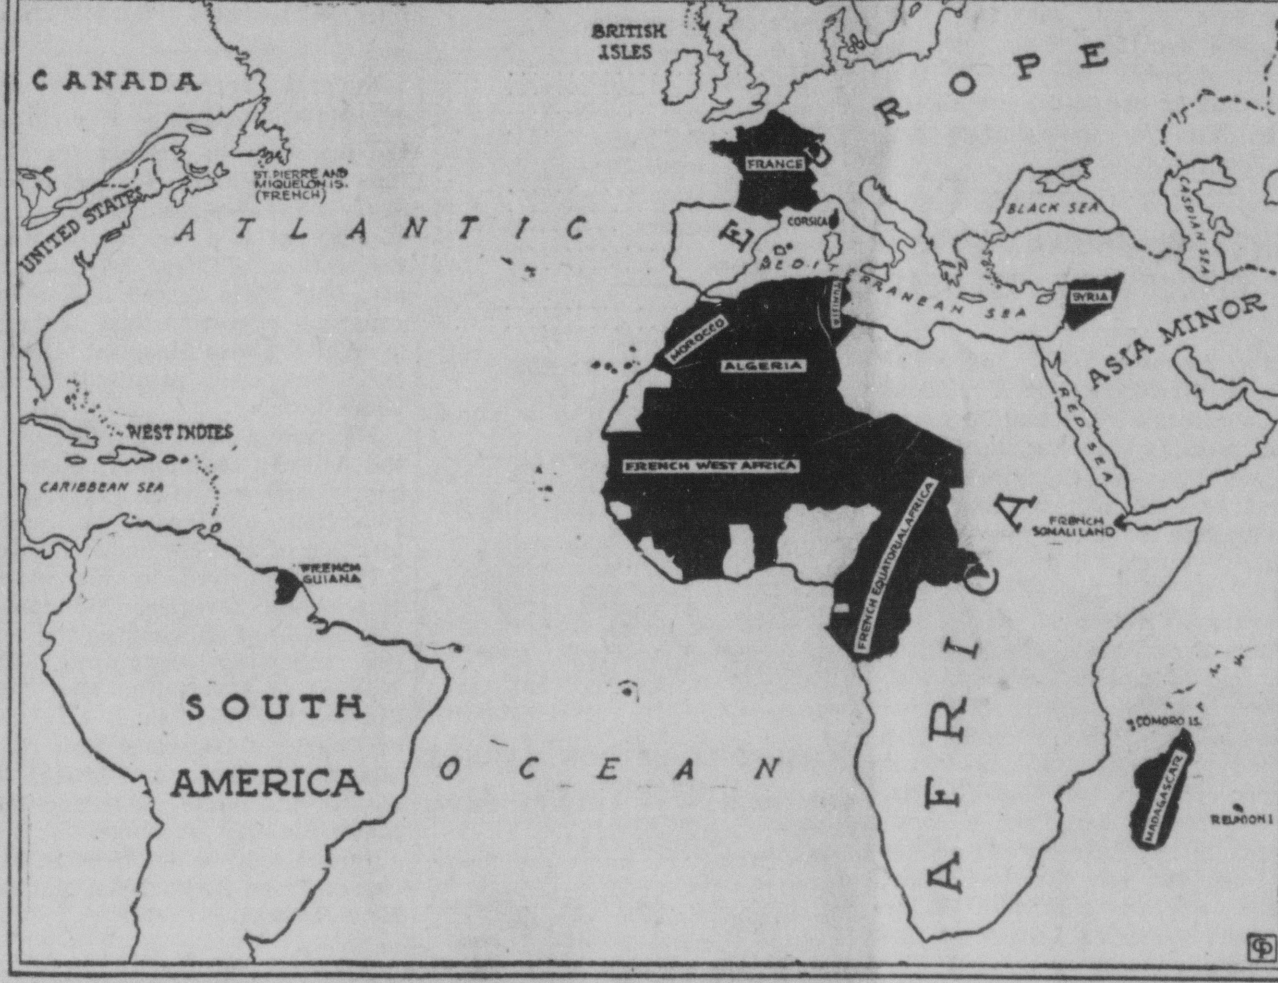

"Capitulation of France concludes the continental phase of the war," Gayda wrote in the Giornale D'Italia.

"At present, the war against the British Empire can be carried out in three ways — the British Isles, the Empire itself, and on the seas.

"The decisive daring and determination of the Italo-German coalition, supported spiritually by the major part of Europe and Asia and not a small part of South America, is capable of facing the imposing resources still at the disposal of the Anglo-Saxons."

"Henceforth," Gayda wrote, "British-American resistance assumes the substance and form of a purely Anglo-Saxon war against the vast remaining part of the world."

France Capitulates—What Of Her Colonies?

SURRENDER of France before the terrific onslaught of Hitler's German legions has raised the question of what will become of her numerous colonies scattered all over the world. This Central Press map shows the locations of these possessions (in black), with the exception of French Indo-China in the Far East and several island groups in the Pacific Ocean. Of the greatest interest to Americans is the probable disposition of France's New World colonies, St. Pierre and Miquelon, in the Atlantic off the coast of Canada, and French Guiana, in South America. Any German attempt to extend the Nazi sway to these colonies in the Western Hemisphere probably would cause the United States to take decisive action in support of the Monroe Doctrine.

Knox Paper Calls For U. S. to Take France's Possessions In West

CHICAGO, June 18—With France apparently forced to surrender unconditionally to Germany, the United States must act at once to take over control of French possessions in the Western Hemisphere, the Chicago Daily News declared today in a front page editorial.

The newspaper, published by Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential nominee in 1936, asserted that the "common safety of the Americas" demands prompt action to prevent the transfer of the French possessions in this hemisphere to German control.

Measures taken regarding the French possessions should be "representative of the 21 nations that comprise the Americas," the newspaper said, adding, "This would mean that the United States, acting as a sort of trustee for the whole western world, would take over French possessions and set up a government for them with, say, three or five of the American governments given representation.

"Such a device would certainly avoid any possibility of the charge that we were acting selfishly, with imperialistic designs in the matter."

Transfer of the French possessions to German control would violate the Monroe Doctrine, the editorial asserted, as well as endanger the safety of the Panama Canal. American defense must be "hemispheric," the editorial said, and the American nations must "begin to think hemispherically."

"In what better way," the article asks in conclusion, "would be begun this new mode of thought than meeting the first tangible danger by common action?"

GIRL SAYS CLASSMATES CUT HER AFTER PROTEST AGAINST PRO-NAZI TALK

NEWARK, N. J., June 18—Ten girl pupils of the Arts High School who, it was charged by 14-year-old Shirley Adams, had beaten and cut her with a razor because she objected to their pro-Nazi and Fascist views, were sought among the freshmen class by school authorities and police today for questioning.

Shirley said she overheard one say "Hitler and Mussolini should come over here and straighten things out." When she objected, she claimed, she was pushed into a washroom and attacked.

OHIOAN ADMITS GIRL LEAPED OUT OF VEHICLE, DIED

LORAIN, June 18—Police Prosecutor Austin O'Toole today was to rule as to whether charges should be placed against a 29-year-old South Lorain steel worker who confessed last night that pretty Velma Ericson, 17, jumped from his moving automobile early Wednesday, shortly before she died of a fractured skull.

The steel worker, a husband and father, broke down and confessed after several hours questioning. He was held technically on suspicion.

According to Detective Lieutenant John Meiser, the man picked up Miss Ericson and a friend, Ruth Ford, 18, outside a restaurant about midnight last Tuesday. He took Miss Ford home and then drove around with Miss Ericson. When he attempted to put his arm around her, Meiser said, she jumped from the moving automobile.

A short time later she was found wandering a dazed condition by the crew of a police scout car. She died several hours after she was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The steel worker was arrested after Miss Ford told police she believed the car in which she was taken home was a Packard, and that the robe cord in the back seat was broken. In checking all the Packards in Lorain, police found that the one belonging to the man arrested had a broken robe cord.

Berlin Newspapers Recall 1918 Debacle In Discussing Demands To Be Voiced By Dictators Meeting In Munich

MUNICH, June 18—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini tonight reached a full agreement on their attitude concerning the request of defeated France for peace. An official statement said: "The Fuehrer and Il Duce have reached an accord regarding the attitude of both their allied governments toward France's request for an armistice." There were no immediate details.

Fate of France hung in the balance today as Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini met in a momentous conference in Munich—birthplace of National Socialism.

With the Rome-Berlin axis partners determined that France shall never again become "England's continental sabre," terms of the peace requested by Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain of France were expected to be harsh. An official spokesman asserted the terms will be framed for immediate acceptance or rejection—without bargaining.

The crowds of Munich gave Hitler a rousing reception when he arrived in his favorite city from his headquarters on the Western Front. A special train brought him to Munich from the fighting line. Its luxurious coaches, the railway platform and the streets of Munich all were liberally bedecked with German and Italian flags.

No Bargaining Accepted

Armistice conditions, worked out jointly between the Fuehrer and Duce, will be handed to the French immediately after the conference has ended.

They must be accepted or rejected. There can be no bargaining.

While the two dictators talked, authoritative circles in Berlin advanced the astounding claim that a total of Fuehrer's Headquarters on the Western Front, June 18—German troops today captured La Creusot, site of the gigantic Schneider-Creusot armament works, material backbone of the French army, the German high command announced today. Capture of the Belfort fortress, chief southern citadel of the Maginot line, also was announced in the official communique.

880,000 tons of shipping, a veritable merchant armada, had been sunk by the German air force yesterday at the mouth of the Loire River in France.

Perhaps the foremost point in the deliberations of Mussolini and Hitler was the question of the French fleet. Whether the French navy would continue the fight or surrender to Germany was a matter of keenest speculation in both Berlin and London—and throughout the world.

A Bordeaux dispatch to the London Daily Mail said the French fleet had engaged the Italian fleet in a major battle in which the Italians reportedly suffered serious losses. But exactly when this battle took place—before or after the French peace offer—was not clear. Also, there was no further confirmation of the Daily Mail dispatch.

At Cairo, an indication of French sentiment in the Near East was forthcoming in a proclamation by General Eugene Mittelhauser, French commander-in-chief of the Allied Near Eastern army, stating that war continues by land, sea and air.

Fighting Continues

Information in London military circles said the French army is still fighting at various points in France. The German high command announced the capture of Belfort, main southern keypoint of the Maginot Line, as well as Dijon and Le Creusot.

At Rome heavy Italian bombing attacks on Malta, Corsica, Bizerta and the Upper Sudan were announced. It was claimed that two enemy oil tankers were sunk.

Enemy planes bombed Milan and other cities on the Ligurian Coast, the announcement added.

Meanwhile the Milan newspaper Corriere Del La Sera reported from Washington on that the British government has requested President Roosevelt to intervene with Rome and Berlin to obtain honorable conditions of peace. The United States embassy in Rome was totally uninformed regarding this report. At Bordeaux, the French radio announced the papal nuncio to France would serve as intermediary in peace negotiations between the French and Italian governments.

In many ways the entire war situation remained confused. Berlin claimed that German troops were storming forward in France against little or no resistance. But Britain still sought to avert "final" French surrender.

All clarification apparently awaited results of the conference between Hitler and Mussolini.

German newspapers recalled the 1918 armistice and hinted that Germany will demand unconditional surrender. London wondered what will happen to the French fleet, the French air force and the French armies in the Near East.

Change in Mediterranean

Berlin also speculated on the French fleet, and German officials predicted that if it quits fighting a "sensational change" will occur in the naval situation in the Mediterranean.

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was to address the House of Commons in London, but whether he would make a detailed statement remained uncertain.

London believed, however, that Churchill would reaffirm his promise in a radio broadcast last night that Britain would fight on against Germany.

This speech, and reports that England was still spurring France to continued military efforts—even offering a "solemn act of union" between Britain and France—lashed the German press into a new fury against Churchill.

Berlin newspapers, in editorials and headlines, branded the British prime minister a "war monger," and accused him of responsibility for the collapse of France. His brief address last night was dismissed as "cheap hypocritical phrases" and "crocodile tears for France."

Geneva reported that French reserves stationed behind the Maginot Line and the French army of General Besson were retreating toward Lyon and advises from Basle said cannonading was heard in France during the night.

Egypt, Turkey on Spot

Reports received in London said a highly critical situation had developed in the Middle East in view of the French collapse, and that both Egypt and Turkey have decided to postpone taking any definite stand against Italy.

Alexandria had a 17-minute air raid warning when Italian planes appeared over the western desert, but failed to reach the city.

In London the British government issued its routine announcement of shipping losses.

"The Willkie movement is spreading like wildfire. It is amazing the number of second and third choice pledges he has received.

"I'm for him for two reasons. First, I think he would have the best chance of being elected. Second, never in our history has there been a time when the ability to unify, organize and coordinate our entire productive capacity was so vital a requirement for the presidency, and Wendell Willkie fills that need better than anybody else on either side. He's a man of forthrightness, great ability, great integrity and complete intellectual honesty. That's the type we need.

"You know, the reason the American people want congress to stay here is not that they like congress but that they distrust the President. They never feel sure that he has told them all the facts. But the people do feel they can trust Willkie."

mediate police measures to see that French territory in the western world is not occupied by Germany. French possessions in the West Indies are of particular importance in view of their possible use as naval or air bases from which to attack the Panama Canal.

Whether the war in France is to continue also will affect the administration's action in relieving some 3,000 American refugees now in the Bordeaux region. If Germany is to continue its drive to the South, the Americans' plight demands immediate action—possibly the dispatch of warships now in European waters to pick them up. If peace comes, they will be in no immediate danger and can be evacuated by regular commercial facilities.

FUEHRER, IL DUCE TALK PEACE PLAN

claimed that German troops were storming forward in France against little or no resistance. But Britain still sought to avert "final" French surrender.

All clarification apparently awaited results of the conference between Hitler and Mussolini.

German newspapers recalled the 1918 armistice and hinted that Germany will demand unconditional surrender. London wondered what will happen to the French fleet, the French air force and the French armies in the Near East.

Change in Mediterranean

Berlin also speculated on the French fleet, and German officials predicted that if it quits fighting a "sensational change" will occur in the naval situation in the Mediterranean.

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was to address the House of Commons in London, but whether he would make a detailed statement remained uncertain.

London believed, however, that Churchill would reaffirm his promise in a radio broadcast last night that Britain would fight on against Germany.

This speech, and reports that England was still spurring France to continued military efforts—even offering a "solemn act of union" between Britain and France—lashed the German press into a new fury against Churchill.

Berlin newspapers, in editorials and headlines, branded the British prime minister a "war monger," and accused him of responsibility for the collapse of France. His brief address last night was dismissed as "cheap hypocritical phrases" and "crocodile tears for France."

Geneva reported that French reserves stationed behind the Maginot Line and the French army of General Besson were retreating toward Lyon and advises from Basle said cannonading was heard in France during the night.

Egypt, Turkey on Spot

Reports received in London said a highly critical situation had developed in the Middle East in view of the French collapse, and that both Egypt and Turkey have decided to postpone taking any definite stand against Italy.

Alexandria had a 17-minute air raid warning when Italian planes appeared over the western desert, but failed to reach the city.

In London the British government issued its routine announcement of shipping losses.

From Berlin:

Nazi forces stormed forward in France today, meeting little or virtually no resistance according to Berlin authorities, while Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini sped to their rendezvous to discuss specific terms in response to the French request for peace.

Indications that Germany may demand unconditional French surrender, widespread speculation concerning the French naval fleet and fiery press attacks on British Prime Minister Winston Churchill occupied Berlin's attention as the Reich awaited the outcome of the meeting between the Fuehrer and Il Duce.

While newspapers hinted that unconditional surrender may be the price of peace, an authoritative statement said:

"Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini will meet some place some time today."

Many Topics To Be Aired

Authorities stated the meeting place could not be divulged at present nor could the length of the conference, since manifold topics to be discussed will involve a "decisive stage" prior to peace negotiations with France.

While the German armies still advanced in France, it was stated, French forces were surrendering en masse.

It was stated on high authority that whole sections of the Maginot Line are being evacuated by the French.

German sources said that confusion among French military units was increased by "conflicting orders and counter-orders issued by the French command," which, they charged, partly ordered immediate cessation of hostilities and partly urged continued resistance, pending conclusion of an armistice.

It was considered likely that any definite information regarding an armistice would be meager until German proposals are definitely accepted or rejected by the French.

But German officials stated that rejection of an armistice would be "practically impossible, because it is evident that France, from a military point of view, is at the mercy of Germany."

Speculation as to whether the French navy may attempt to disobey anticipated orders to capitulate and try to join the British fleet, or whether it will leave the British to fight the Italian and German navies single-handed, proved a matter of great interest to Berlin.

If the British navy is left to face the German and Italian navies alone, German sources said, there might be a "sensational change" in the naval situation in the Mediterranean.

Terms Serve To Be Stern

The press left no doubt that the terms decided on will be stern. Indicative of German sentiment were articles calling for an end of the "French threat" and recalling the "humiliations" to which German negotiators were exposed at Compiègne in 1918 at the end of the World War.

From London:

The battle of France was lost at Dunkerque, Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared in the House of Commons today.

Recounting the Sedan disaster, Churchill said:

"This entailed the loss of fifteen or sixteen French divisions and threw out of action for a critical period the whole British expeditionary force," he said.

Commenting on the Dunkerque withdrawal and the losses suffered, Churchill said:

"This loss inevitably took some weeks to repair, and in the first two of those weeks the battle in France was lost."

"When we consider the heroic resistance made by the French army against heavy odds and enormous losses inflicted on the enemy and evident exhaustion of the enemy, it may well be thought that the Anglo-French divisions lost or evacuated in early stages might well have turned the scale."

Amid a situation that remained confusingly obscure, Great Britain today was reported persisting in efforts to prevent a "final" French surrender to Nazi Germany.

With positive news of what the Rome-Berlin axis will demand from France still lacking following France's request for peace, major questions arising from the French collapse could not yet be answered.

Among these questions are those relating to disposition of the French naval fleet, the French air force and the French armies in the Near East. For clarification of these and many other vital issues, all eyes were turned on the meeting between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, who will decide on terms to be offered to France.

Morning newspapers re-echoed the spirit of Churchill's brief radio address yesterday, in which he said Britain will continue the fight. Hitler cannot triumph, they said, unless he can annihilate the British Isles.

The British effort to prevent France from making a "final surrender" was spurred by the radio address of French Foreign Minister Paul Bauduin, who declared last night that France would not accept a dishonorable armistice.

A French government radio broadcast picked up in New York early today by the Columbia Broadcasting System stated:

"It is untrue to say the government has ordered cessation of the struggle. The struggle will go on as long as France and Germany have not agreed on the conditions of an eventual suspension of hostilities. And if the conditions are contrary to the honor and independence of France, the war will go on. That is, furthermore, what M. Paul Bauduin, minister of foreign affairs, implied in a broadcast speech he made Monday evening."

While official quarters declined to comment on the nature of these efforts to persuade France to fight on, political circles said:

"Britain could not go further than a sweeping offer to merge the two empires."

London's movements indicated England is doing its utmost to salvage everything possible out of the French collapse and that many military trump cards are at stake.

BRICKER'S SIX MEASURES WIN EARLY BACKING

St. Marys Man Offers Bill To Divide State And National Ballots

NO OPPOSITION VOICED

Pension Boost To Maximum Of $40 Asked; Others Go On Docket

COLUMBUS, June 18—Measures embodied in Gov. John W. Bricker's call for a special session started through the legislative mill today, with passage of all believed assured before the week ends.

Heading the list of six so-called emergency measures was the one to separate the national and state ballots in presidential years. Fred Seibert (R) St. Marys, introduced this administration bill in the upper house.

Chairman Fred Reiners, whose committee on elections received the Seibert bill, indicated a favorable report might come today, but it was expected to be the last of the six administration measures to be voted on.

Opposition to the ballot separation proposal, before the session heard loudly in the camp of U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, a leading aspirant for the GOP presidential nomination, melted away as a harmony move gained momentum. Virtually all Republican house and senate members were expected to vote for it on the roll call.

Fear Local Defeat

Aside from the session's political aspect, as expressed in the ballot separation bill which, its opponents claim, is proposed so that the Republican state and county tickets need not necessarily be dragged down to defeat in event of a Democratic landslide nationally, other measures of vital concern to a large percent of Ohio's population were introduced and referred to committees.

In all, Governor Bricker, in a message to the special session cheered wildly by the overwhelming Republican majority and by a packed gallery last night, called for the appropriation of $2,500,000 in state funds for relief and for expanding old age pensions and increasing the monthly maximum from $30 to $40.

Assurance, not only that these appropriations would entail no new or increased taxes now or in the next biennium, barring a national debacle, came from the governor. House Speaker William McCulloch ruled out of order several proposals by Rep. Gus Kasch (D) Akron, to increase taxes, notably on cigarettes and utilities.

Three administration measures were introduced in the House. They were:

- 1.—To increase old age pensions to a maximum of $40 a month, by Rep. Hayden (R) Clermont.
- 2.—To appropriate $1,460,387 to supplement poor relief allocations made between July 1, 1939 and December 31, 1939, and to appropriate unexpended balances for relief, by Reps. Myers (R) Allen and Shaw (R) Madison.
- 3.—To authorize distribution of federal aid funds for dependent children to counties on a 50-50 basis, by Rep. Robert (R) Stark.

Three In Senate

The other three Bricker bills were introduced in the senate. They were:

- 1.—To appropriate $1,000,000 in state funds (and $1,000,000 from federal government) for old age pensions, by Sen. Adams (R) Wood.
- 2.—To separate national and state ballots, by Sen. Seibert (R) Auglaize.
- 3.—To authorize local subdivisions to fund poor relief deficiencies unpaid as of Jan. 1, 1940, by Sen. Milroy (D) Lucas.

In addition, Rep. Ballard (R) Jackson, introduced a bill appropriating $57,900 for special session expenses of the lower house. The senate bill will come later.

Governor Bricker failed to refer to the Taft-for-president leaders in outlining the ballot separation proposal. He said that it was necessary to insure a clear cut contest November 5 between himself and his Democratic opponent for governor, Martin L. Davey.

"The people of Ohio," he said "are competent to judge between the administration of my predecessor and this one. The issues should be clear cut. By separating the ballots we get a free expression of that judgment."

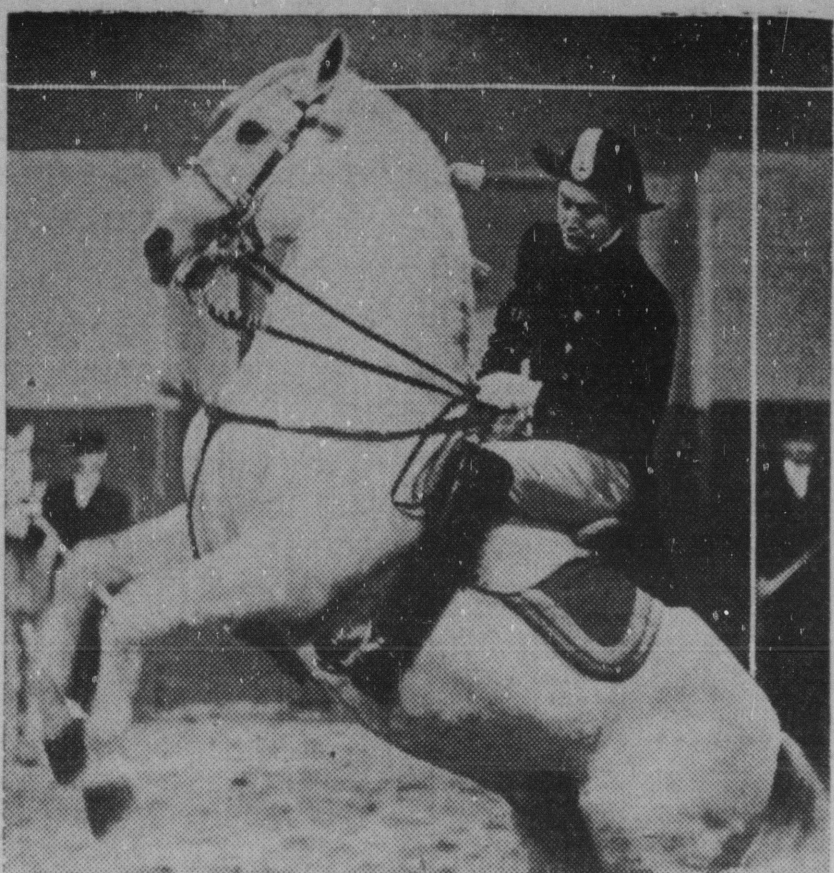

Okeed-By Davey

Davey, too, previously declared he would welcome a ballot separation so there would be no obscuring of the issues between himself and Bricker in November.

Bricker touched lightly on the grave international situation, pledging his administration to cooperate 100 percent in building an impregnable defense against attack by any foreign foe.

He concluded by saying no other special sessions of the 93rd General Assembly were likely unless it becomes necessary to strengthen

Ohio G. O. P. Delegates Doubt Willkie Power

By Carl Turner

COLUMBUS, June 18 — "What will be the effect of the Wendell Willkie candidacy?"

That question was heard frequently today as Ohio's 52 delegates and 52 alternates began the trek to Philadelphia for the Republican national convention opening next Monday.

Ohio's 52 convention votes are pledged solidly to U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, one of the leading presidential candidates, and thus far no Willkie sentiment has reared its head among the Buckeye delegates, even as second choice, so far as could be learned.

But the reputed sudden increase in strength of the New York utilities leader as a possible nominee caused many a delegate to wonder whether Willkie might not be able to muster enough votes in the large field to seriously handicap the leaders.

Nevertheless, Ohio delegation leaders professed confidence that Senator Taft not only will lead the field on the first ballot at Philadelphia, but that he will win the nomination.

If Taft should be deprived of victory by a convention deadlock among top contenders, it is tacitly understood that Ohio's strength would go to Gov. John W. Bricker, a delegate-at-large pledged to the nomination of Taft.

"In such event, wouldn't the Willkie candidacy muddle the situation for Bricker?" one delegate who has been present at most GOP national conventions since 1916 was asked.

"Won't it muddle it for everyone?" was the reply.

Election Doubted

This delegate, incidentally, was convinced that ever if nominated Willkie could not be elected because a large portion of the public identifies him so closely with "big business."

The Willkie boom sprouted in Indiana, his native state, and some vocal opposition to it also has issued from Ohio's neighbor to the West.

On the desk of this particular delegate was a photo copy of the Willkie mention in the last three issues of "Who's Who," with Willkie's political designations as a Democrat heavily underscored. The sender was anonymous. It is generally known that Willkie formerly was a Democrat.

Congressman Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ironton, already is representing Ohio unofficially on the Republican platform committee now holding preliminary sessions in Philadelphia. His selection, by national defenses or "purge our society of the slimy dross which has crept into our land."

That lower house ratified selection of Rep. Harold W. Houston (R) Urbana, as Republican floor leader, Houston won out over Rep. William H. Deddens (R) Cincinnati, in a GOP caucus.

John Jones, Columbus, was named house sergeant-at-arms to fill a vacancy.

Speaker McCulloch predicted the work of the special session could be completed easily before the end of the week as committees took up consideration of the proposed legislation.

FLAGSTAD WITH CROSBY

A rare treat is in store for Music Hall listeners Thursday, for on that night Bing Crosby entertains one of the operatic greats of all time—Kirsten Flagstad. On the calendar of events, Bing has pencilled in a pair of interviews with Roland Young, comedian; and Garson Kanin, the young RKO director who is considered a genius by his conferees.

To further the prospect of an entertaining hour over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. Bob Burns will be there with his bazooka; the Music Mads will trill a few numbers in close harmony; and John Scott Trotters' ever-present eighteen will take care of the musical accompaniment.

In between numbers, Kirsten Flagstad will tell Bing Crosby about her ranch in Montana. The Metropolitan Opera Company singer made a special trip to the ranch with her daughter before going to Hollywood to appear in the Music Hall.

Not quite a week later, on June 16, he was presented with a Doctorate of Law at Olivet College, Michigan, where he also delivered the commencement address to the graduating class. This was broadcast over Mutual.

WANTED: A Foreign Policy

Mussolini has drawn his stiletto. Whatever may be said of the bravery of his deed, it requires an immediate audit of our foreign policy. Are we going to war against both Germany and Italy? In 1917 Italy was our ally and Germany's foe. She is now Germany's ally. Moreover, if to save face we go still farther into Europe, will Japan jump on our backs and attack the Philippines, Dutch East Indies and all points east? In 1917 Japan was our ally. Is she now?

During the World War Spain remained neutral. Today her government stands on a base built by Hitler and Mussolini. Will Spain now make a deal with Hitler and Mussolini to reconquer Gibraltar which England took from her two centuries ago? Then we have Russia.

During the World War Russia was our ally and Germany's foe. Her present attitude toward Germany is like that of the administration toward England and France, — non-belligerent, but unneutral.

This may be a situation where every prospect pleases. College presidents and columnists indulge in the luxury of declaring war against Germany. They are probably beyond draft age so they vent a riskless fury. If any are of draft age Senator Bennett Champ Clark reminded them the other day that the trains are still running to Canada, where they may enlist.

But for the millions of mothers whose sons are of draft age, the question how much American blood we shall now spill in Europe and Asia cannot be passed off by pounding a desk either in Washington or on a college campus.

The country hopes Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy in Latin America will prove a success. The country has also endorsed his statement that we will not permit Canada to be conquered by a foreign power,—an extension of the Monroe Doctrine. But with respect to his efforts to make the entire universe behave, it now is clear that he has helped nobody,—Finland, Norway, China, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Belgium, England, France, while accomplishing no good he has incurred the ill will of powerful nations.

We have at all times had the option of either one of two foreign policies. Either might have made us impregnable at home and respected throughout the world. We have pursued neither.

One course was the traditional George Washington-President Monroe policy of adequate preparedness to maintain the territorial integrity of the Western Hemisphere under the Monroe Doctrine, and beyond that not to indulge in the dangerous sport of sticking our noses into every hornet's nest in the world.

The other policy which we might have adopted was the League of Nations and the Guarantee Pact which Lloyd George and Wilson promised France. The "Union Now" principle of Clarence Streit is a modern variation. This policy would require American boys to be ready to defend Djibouti, Tunisia, Somaliland, etc.

As candidate for Vice President in 1920 Mr. Roosevelt advocated this policy. He was overwhelmingly defeated, but nevertheless it was—and is—a straightforward

United States out of their war calculations "anywhere."

But within a year after his election on this promise, Mr. Roosevelt in his Chicago quarantine speech of 1937 abandoned his 1936 pledge of "true neutrality" and returned to his first love—the League of Nations. In April 1939, before the war broke out, he stated in so many words that the "force" of this nation must be reckoned with by Adolf Hitler and that our involvement is "inevitable."

If the President's foreign policy is neither understood at home nor respected abroad, he has only himself to blame.

KEEP CONGRESS IN SESSION.

Fear Local Defeat

Aside from the session's political aspect, as expressed in the ballot separation bill which, its opponents claim, is proposed so that the Republican state and county tickets need not necessarily be dragged down to defeat in event of a Democratic landslide nationally, other measures of vital concern to a large percent of Ohio's population were introduced and referred to committees.

In all, Governor Bricker, in a message to the special session cheered wildly by the overwhelming Republican majority and by a packed gallery last night, called for the appropriation of $2,500,000 in state funds for relief and for expanding old age pensions and increasing the monthly maximum from $30 to $40.

Assurance not only that these appropriations would entail no new or increased taxes now or in the next biennium, barring a national debacle, came from the governor. House Speaker William McCulloch ruled out of order several proposals by Rep. Gus Kasch (D) Akron, to increase taxes, notably on cigarettes and utilities.

Three administration measures were introduced in the House. They were:

- 1.—To increase old age pensions to a maximum of $40 a month, by Rep. Hayden (R) Clermont.
- 2.—To appropriate $1,460,387 to supplement poor relief allocations made between June 1, 1939 and December 31, 1939, and to appropriate unexpended balances for relief, by Reps. Myers (R) Allen and Shaw (R) Madison.
- 3.—To authorize distribution of federal aid funds for dependent children to counties on a 50-50 basis, by Rep. Robert (R) Stark.

Three In Senate

The other three Bricker bills were introduced in the senate. They were:

- 1.—To appropriate $1,000,000 in state funds (and $1,000,000 from federal government) for old age pensions, by Sen. Adams (R) Wood.
- 2.—To separate national and state ballots, by Sen. Seibert (R) Auglaize.
- 3.—To authorize local subdivisions to fund poor relief deficiencies unpaid as of Jan. 1, 1940, by Sen. Milroy (D) Lucas.

In addition, Rep. Ballard (R) Jackson, introduced a bill appropriating $57,900 for special session expenses of the lower house. The senate bill will come later.

Governor Bricker failed to refer to the abated supposition of certain Taft-for-president leaders in outlining the ballot separation proposal. He said that it was necessary to insure a clear cut contest November 5 between himself and his Democratic opponent for governor, Martin L. Davey.

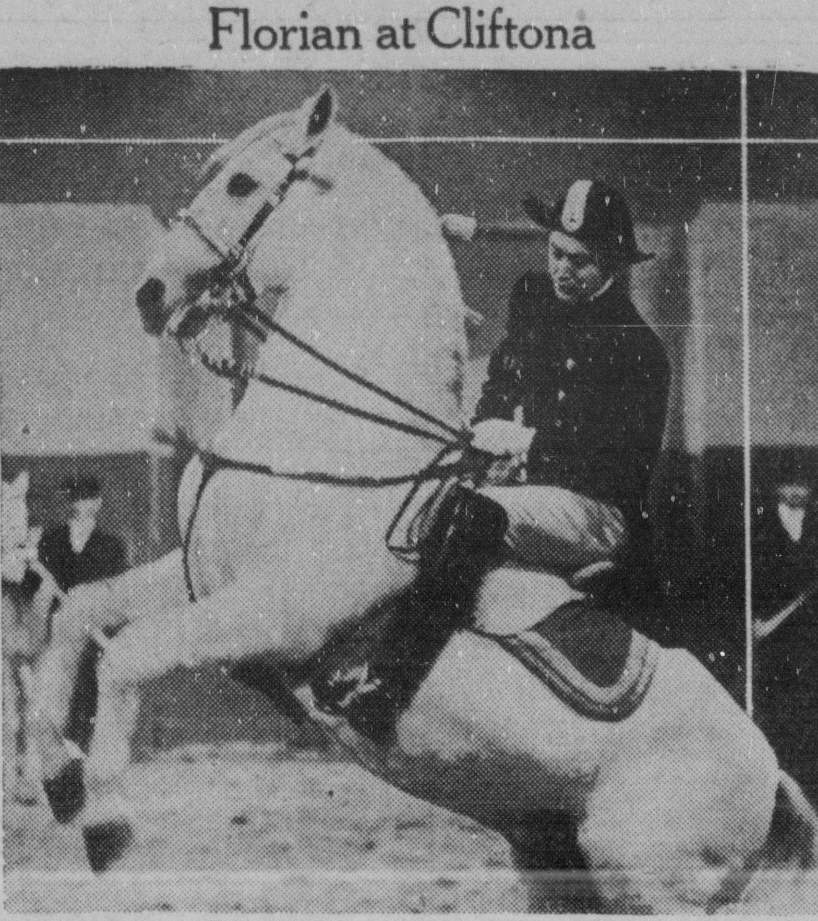

"The people of Ohio," he said "are competent to judge between the administration of my predecessor and this one. The issues should be clear cut. By separating the ballots we get a free expression of that judgment."

Okehed: By Davey

Davey, too, previously declared he would welcome a ballot separation so there would be no obscuring of the issues between himself and Bricker in November.

Bricker touched lightly on the grave international situation, pledging his administration to cooperate 100 percent in building an impregnable defense against attack by any foreign foe.

He concluded by saying no other special sessions of the 93rd General Assembly were likely unless it becomes necessary to strengthen

Ohio G. O. P. Delegates Doubt Willkie Power

By Carl Turner

COLUMBUS, June 18 — "What will be the effect of the Wendell Willkie candidacy?"

That question was heard frequently today as Ohio's 52 delegates and 52 alternates began the trek to Philadelphia for the Republican national convention opening next Monday.

Ohio's 52 convention votes are pledged solidly to U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, one of the leading presidential candidates, and thus far no Willkie sentiment has reared its head among the Buckeye delegates, even as second choice, so far as could be learned.

But the reputed sudden increase in strength of the New York utilities leader as a possible nominee caused many a delegate to wonder whether Willkie might not be able to muster enough votes in the large field to seriously handicap the leaders.

Nevertheless, Ohio delegation leaders professed confidence that Senator Taft not only will lead the field on the first ballot at Philadelphia, but that he will win the nomination.

If Taft should be deprived of victory by a convention deadlock among top contenders, it is tacitly understood that Ohio's strength would go to Gov. John W. Bricker, a delegate-at-large pledged to the nomination of Taft.

"In such event, wouldn't the Willkie candidacy muddle the situation for Bricker?" one delegate who has been present at most GOP national conventions since 1916 was asked.

"Won't it muddle it for everyone?" was the reply.

Election Doubtful

This delegate, incidentally, was convinced that ever if nominated Willkie could not be elected because a large portion of the public identifies him so closely with "big business."

The Willkie boom sprouted in Indiana, his native state, and some vocal opposition to it also has issued from Ohio's neighbor to the West.

On the desk of this particular delegate was a photo copy of the Willkie mention in the last three issues of "Who's Who," with Willkie's political designations as a Democrat heavily underscored. The sender was anonymous. It is generally known that Willkie formerly was a Democrat.

Congressman Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ironton, already is representing Ohio unofficially on the Republican platform committee now holding preliminary sessions in Philadelphia. His selection, by national defenses or "purge our society of the slimy dross which has crept into our land."

That lower house ratified selection of Rep. Harold W. Houston (R) Urbana, as Republican floor leader, Houston won out over Rep. William H. Deddens (R) Cincinnati, in a GOP caucus.

John Jones, Columbus, was named house sergeant-at-arms to fill a vacancy.

Speaker McCulloch predicted the work of the special session could be completed easily before the end of the week as committees took up consideration of the proposed legislation.

FLAGSTAD WITH CROSBY

A rare treat is in store for Music Hall listeners Thursday, for on that night Bing Crosby entertains one of the operatic greats of all time—Kirsten Flagstad. On the calendar of events, Bing has pencilled in a pair of interviews with Roland Young, comedian; and Garson Kanin, the young RKO director who is considered a genius by his conferees.

To further the prospect of an entertaining hour over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. Bob Burns will be there with his bazooka; the Music Mads will trill a few numbers in close harmony; and John Scott Trotters' ever-present eighteen will take care of the musical accompaniment.

In between numbers, Kirsten Flagstad will tell Bing Crosby about her ranch in Montana. The Metropolitan Opera Company singer made a special trip to the ranch with her daughter before going to Hollywood to appear in the Music Hall.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

WANTED: A Foreign Policy

Mussolini has drawn his stiletto. Whatever may be said of the bravery of his deed, it requires an immediate audit of our foreign policy. Are we going to war against both Germany and Italy? In 1917 Italy was our ally and Germany's foe. She is now Germany's ally. Moreover, if to save face we go still farther into Europe, will Japan jump on our backs and attack the Philippines, Dutch East Indies and all points east? In 1917 Japan was our ally. Is she now?

During the World War Spain remained neutral. Today her government stands on a base built by Hitler and Mussolini. Will Spain now make a deal with Hitler and Mussolini to reconquer Gibraltar which England took from her two centuries ago? Then we have Russia. During the World War Russia was our ally and Germany's foe. Her present attitude toward PETTENGILL "only man is vile," but certainly not "where every prospect pleases." College presidents and columnists indulge in the luxury of declaring war against Germany. They are probably beyond draft age so they vent a riskless fury. If any are of draft age Senator Bennett Champ Clark reminded them the other day that the trains are still running to Canada, where they may enlist.

But for the millions of mothers whose sons are of draft age, the question how much American blood we shall now spill in Europe and Asia cannot be passed off by pounding a desk either in Washington or on a college campus.

The country hopes Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy in Latin America will prove a success. The country has also endorsed his statement that we will not permit Canada to be conquered by a foreign power—an extension of the Monroe Doctrine. But with respect to his efforts to make the entire universe behave, it now is clear that he has helped nobody,—Finland, Norway, China, Sudesteland, Abyssinia, Albania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Holland, Belgium, England, France, While accomplishing no good he has incurred the ill will of powerful nations.

We have at all times had the option of either one of two foreign policies. Either might have made us impregnable at home and respected throughout the world. We have pursued neither.

One course was the traditional George Washington-President Monroe policy of adequate preparedness to maintain the territorial integrity of the Western Hemisphere under the Monroe Doctrine, and beyond that not to indulge in the dangerous sport of sticking our noses into every hornet's nest in the world.

The other policy which we might have adopted was the League of Nations and the Guarantee Pact which Lloyd George and Wilson promised France. The "Union Now" principle of Clarence Streit is a modern variation. This policy would require American boys to be ready to defend Djibouti, Tunisia, Somaliland, etc. As candidate for Vice President in 1920 Mr. Roosevelt advocated this policy. He was overwhelmingly defeated, but nevertheless it was—and is—a straightforward

But within a year after his election on this promise, Mr. Roosevelt in his Chicago quarantine speech of 1937 abandoned his 1936 pledge of "true neutrality" and returned to his first love—the League of Nations. In April 1939, before the war broke out, he stated in so many words that the "force" of this nation must be reckoned with by Adolf Hitler and that our involvement is "inevitable."

If the President's foreign policy is neither understood at home nor respected abroad, he has only himself to blame.

KEEP CONGRESS IN SESSION.

SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL.

ABOUT BEER AND ALE

AN OPEN FORUM OF QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: WHY IS BEER CALLED THE BEVERAGE OF MODERATION?

ANSWER: Because beer's alcoholic content is low. Temperate, moderate nations of the world...and their people...prefer beer.

QUESTION: DO BEER AND ALE REALLY AID THE FARMERS?

ANSWER: Since re-legalization the brewing industry has bought 25,000,000,000 pounds of farm products. That has helped farmers... particularly during the depression years.

QUESTION: JUST WHAT ARE BEER AND ALE MADE OF?

ANSWER: Beer is made by a natural fermentation process... from malted barley and other grains, hops, yeast, water. Nature makes beer. The brewer makes it good beer (and ale).

QUESTION: HOW MUCH DO BEER TAXES CONTRIBUTE TO THE COST OF GOVERNMENT?

ANSWER: Beer contributes $1,000,000 a day... $400,000,000 a year... to help pay the costs of government... local, state and federal. Everybody benefits from this contribution.

QUESTION: DO BEER AND ALE MAKE JOBS FOR WORKERS?

ANSWER: Beer and ale have already made a million jobs. This employment is widespread... all over the country. More than 100 other industries benefit from beer and ale.

QUESTION: HOW IS THE BREWING INDUSTRY COOPERATING WITH LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS?

ANSWER: The Brewing Industry is active on the side of law and order. A "self-regulation" plan to eliminate retail abuses has already been put into effect in a number of states in cooperation with law enforcement authorities. This plan is being extended. We would like to tell you about it. Write for an interesting free booklet. Address: United Brewers Industrial Foundation, 19 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y.

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

THERE are sound arguments for Congress remaining in session—with time off for political conventions, of course—while the war situation remains critical.
This is a much changed and very dangerous world that we are now living in, with new problems arising almost every day and many of them calling for legislative as well as executive action.

Naturally in such a time the governmental "plant" should be able to function with the smoothness and power of a great industrial plant. There has been unusual teamwork since this crisis developed, and there seems to be no good reason why it should not continue along the same line, in spite of the fact that this is an "election year." It may be safely assumed that an overwhelming majority of public men at Washington are patriots before they are partisans. As for exceptions, if there are any, the voters will know how to deal with them in due time.

It will be a good thing, too, right now,
to continue giving the world a continued demonstration of democracy in effective action.

INVASION

CHARLES A. Lindbergh is quoted as telling Washington lawmakers that the United States cannot be successfully invaded "in our lifetime." He is decrying
"hysterical fears" of this kind.

We all hope he is right. But it may be said, without discourtesy to this famous aviator, that he doesn't know, and nobody knows. And from the way inventions and national enmities have been speeding things up lately, it seems safer to expect new forms of hell to break loose, and to be ready for them.

ONLY MIRACLE COULD SAVE ALLIES
WASHINGTON—It is now recognized in U. S. military and diplomatic circles that almost nothing except a miracle can save the Allies, and in days of armored tanks and skies blackened with airplanes, miracles don't happen easily.

In fact, there seems to be only one miracle within the realm of possibility, and that is the entry into the war of both the United States and Russia. This would mean that these two countries of extremely opposite political views would become allies of the Allies.

The effect of Russia's entry into the war would be of more immediate value than the United States'. Automatically it would bring Turkey into the war, a bad blow for Italy; also it would bring in Rumania and Jugoslavia on the side of the Allies.

Whether Russia will do this remains to be seen. But there is no question that Stalin is on the spot. The sending of half a million Red troops to the Baltic states for protection against Germany clearly indicates his worry. Obviously when Hitler gets through cleaning up Western Europe, the fertile wheat fields and rich coal mines of the Ukraine are going to look most enticing.

One thing to remember about Stalin is that he is intensely personal. With him, personal supremacy comes first.
Hundreds of leaders who disagreed with him have vanished from sight.

Ordinarily, the annihilation of capitalist France and Britain would be manna to Communism. But their annihilation also may mean the annihilation of the Stalin regime—which is the one and only reason why you now see Russia moving somewhat toward the Allies.

U. S. NEEDS FRIENDS

The position of the United States today is very simple. For years it has had a powerful friend—the British Empire.
Senate isolationists would have thrown up their hands in horror at the mere mention of the fact, but for all practical purposes
Great Britain for years has been our ally.

But with British weakening today, the United States has to woo a new ally.
Otherwise it cannot protect itself on both the Atlantic and Pacific. The only available allies today are Japan and Russia, neither very welcome, but in this day of blitzkrieged national prestige, beggars cannot be choosers.

That is why you will find some even of the slow-moving young men around the State Department today giving thought to the idea of our warming up to Russia.

Dislocated Disk Causes Some Low Back Pain

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A patient writes "I have been told that my sciatica is due to a protruded intervertebral disk. Will you please explain what this means?"

●THE BACKBONE is composed of a series of superimposed separate bones. Between each one is a cartilaginous disk called the "intervertebral disk." Recent studies have indicated that in certain cases low back pain and sciatica may be due to dislocation of this cartilaginous disk. The condition is known as "protruded intervertebral disk."

A considerable difference of opinion has been expressed as to how often it occurs. Probably a very low percentage—not more than 2 per cent of all cases of low dium hypochlorite. Another solution used is calcium hypochlorite in a two per cent solution. This is generally cheaper than sodium hypochlorite but there have been no careful studies on the capacity of calcium hypochlorite to kill ringworm. It is also more irritating to tissues.

Sodium hypochlorite is conveniently purchased in metal chemical carboys in 20 per cent strength. This is diluted twenty to one for placing in footbaths and the solution should be changed every second or third day. The approximate cost per change should be about 10 or 15 cents, depending on the size of the foot-bath.

A diabetic or a person who is overweight, who uses saccharin regularly asks whether its continued use is accompanied by any harm.

No. This subject has been carefully investigated by a number of workers, and except in extremely large doses, no harmful effect has ever been proved from its use. The average amount of saccharin used is about a half a grain in a cup of coffee, making one and one-half grains a day the average dose. This can be continued for an indefinite period.

There are plenty of diabetic patients who have used saccharin for years and can testify to this fact.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet costs 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

OLD MR. MERRIFIELD learned of the plans for the new play and was delighted with them. He had never heard of any sort of dramatic presentation in the outdoors; the very thought was exciting to him.

"Mr. Weems, where are you, sir?" he called to his secretary who had hovered near the conference this morning. The secretary came forward respectfully. "Mr. Weems, how long since our tennis courts have been reconsecrated?"

"The tennis courts, sir?"

"Certainly, certainly! The tennis courts!" The old millionaire glared, spoke loudly. "We have tennis courts here at The Oaks, Mr. Weems, haven't we?"

"Oh, of course, sir. But it has been—oh, quite some years—since anyone has used them."

"Regrettable, Mr. Weems. There are two courts. I often walk past them. My daughter used them frequently. I have observed that they are in poor shape. Holes in them. Worn out, no doubt. Mr. Weems, see that they are rebuilt immediately. Rebuilt, sir. You hear?"

"Oh, of course, sir. Poor Mr. Weems was a literalist. Not until he had observed the others all laughing at him did he realize they had been teasing, and even then he was slightly confused. He stood in perpetual awe of the man who was at the same time his employer and friend. But when Gayle squeezed his arm, he smiled happily.

"Both of you old dears scat out of here," she ordered. "You know good and well you're in the best possible seats in the front row."

"She dropped to a stage whisper. 'I'll slip you in myself!'"

The play had been written and re-written in "final" form, so that parts could be typed and given to the various actors. Bill wrote in at least some part, as before, for each of the seven girls now in the Merrifield household, and arranged for both himself and Jeremy Tucker to play dual roles. Jeremy had to be a youth in Acts I and II, and a college professor in Act III. He had more to do than he had had in the first play.

The new al fresco production, however, was only a part of the excitement planned for The Oaks. Preparation of it soon was going on, but so were preparations for the magnificent reception and ball scheduled for that same evening.

The date was less than a month away. Society editors from the newspapers, keeping in close touch with The Oaks now, began early to mention the preparations, and Mrs. Molly Van Osdale learned first that the play was to be out of doors. On next Sunday morning, Page One of her society section carried an eight-column headline: "AL FRESCO DRAMA TO BE REVIVED AT MERRIFIELD ESTATE."

The sub-heading said that "Brilliant Reception Included in Plans for Staging 'The Wit to Woo'."

Mrs. Molly knew that they would be of major interest to the high-strung stratum of society life, and so worded her article with that in mind. There is a subtle difference in society news coverage—things for the elite can be stated one way, things for the mass public another. Mrs. Molly went quite snooty, with her tongue in her cheek, she was well aware that the high hats had been high-hatted at The Oaks a few weeks ago, and she wanted to see what would happen next.

So, apparently, did practically everybody else in the city. A great many people telephoned in. Committees from five different charities called on Mr. Merrifield asking that some of the proceeds from the play be diverted to their organizations. He referred them all to Bill Bailey. More than 100 applications for tickets to the play came to The Oaks in the mail, and poor Graham, the butler, was so busy with telephone calls about tickets, and about details of the play in general, that he hired an assistant to help him.

Bill and Gayle learned of these things promptly, but they were more and more busy with rehearsals again, with costuming, lighting of the outdoor stages, makeup, acoustics, all the problems that assail directors and managers of any play plus the additional ones that nag at amateurs.

Cholly Farrington's gossip column in the Chronicle-Post came out with a lifted-eyebrows remarkable paragraph or two concerning the activity at The Oaks.

"Draw up a rocker, my dears," he chatted. "Have you heard? About the Merrifield Oaks?" The maid to measure, it seems, was duly measured, and so was the public taste. Whereupon, 'The Wit to Woo' is being concocted at the same stand.

"If this were anything but pure charity, or if Mr. M. were anything but pure generosity, this might all be open to suspicion. Not so, though. It's a little early to reveal the insidest information—but your humble correspondent humbly submits that there are still seven beautiful girls headquartered in the big house on Montrose, not to mention a young dramatic genius and a millionaire grandson. Anything can happen there. Very probably it will. Stand by for further instructions."

Meanwhile, too, some "outside" young people had begun to drop in at The Oaks. The first party given in Jeremy's honor had been largely fringed up for him by the other youths there who invited their friends. But Jeremy had chanced to meet a few of the guests later in a roadhouse. And Gayle had tactfully called a few of the others on the telephone for him.

On a Friday afternoon after the rehearsals were started, and after the papers had informed the world about the new play, a carload of young people rolled up the long drive to The Oaks. A detached observer might have said that it came up diffidently, almost warily; plainly the driver wasn't too sure of himself. The Oaks was truly an awesome estate.

No one was in sight when the youths stopped near the front porch. Presently the car gave a tentative honk, and a butler, saw them from within. "It appears,

Also he or she will be frank, active, energetic, impulsive, intuitive and original. In many cases there will be oratorical ability.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Out and about the ville an hour late, having scanned the watch from an improperly lighted angle and through sleepy eyes. Was most surprised to note the time indicated by the courthouse clock. Hurried to the plant to learn that the place gets along very well without me.

Almost everyone knows Chuck Moody, now of Worthington, who married our own Ruth Cryder. Chuck is quite a fisherman and over long, long years accumulated much valuable and pet tackle. That tackle was among the first equipment moved into their new home recently. Someone stole all of it. I can appreciate his loss, and so can every other man who owns and uses a rod and reel. One just does not accumulate sufficient fishing tackle over night. The job requires a fifteen or a twenty year plan and the expenditure of a lot of money, some of which represents shortages in socks and ties and what-not.

Through the mail, special delivery, came an engraved pipe and samples of fine smoking tobacco, the pipe bearing the inscription "T. E. The Fisherman." Now, I will have to speed up on my fishing, having neglected it shamefully so far this season. No card with the gift, and I regret that for I would like to express thanks.

Everyone continues talking about the war and about little else. Sympathy more than ever now is with the Allies. Have heard several persons make declarations that sooner or later, after the statements have passed from mouth to mouth, building up all the time, may result in serious damage to local folk. Reputations are established only after long, long years of right and careful living. They may be destroyed over night. Don't jump at conclusions and don't repeat scandal about this or that citizen. If you suspect a man or woman of pro-Germanism report your suspicions to the authorities for investigation. And in the meantime refrain from talking. What you and everyone else desires is adequate protection for our land. If we have Nazis among us they will be caught and dealt with in proper manner. Waste no sympathy on them, but refrain from talking about any citizen until you have every assurance that what you talk is the whole truth. In other words, keep your eyes and ears open and your mouth shut if you wish to be of real service to this country of ours. Any Nazi will hang himself if given enough rope, but if you start talking about him too soon he will go so deep under cover that he may never be caught. Report to the authorities if you have suspicions.

Chatted with Bill Cady and Irv Leist, just back from a two weeks vacation trip into Canada. A lot of rain and even frost up there. No trouble getting in or out of the country. The mayor reported that several Canadians believe that sooner or later the U. S. will be asked to take over Canada. We have more than we know how to handle right now without taking on such an obligation as that.

RED BIRDS VISIT TWIN CITIES IN SWING TO WEST

COLUMBUS, June 18—Eastern clubs of the American Association invaded the lair of Western teams today and the Minneapolis Millers had a chance to gain first place in the league pennant race. If the Millers can win from Columbus while Indianapolis is defeating Kansas City, they will hold a half-game advantage—the same now held by Kansas City. The Millers won from Milwaukee, 9 to 6, yesterday while the Blues were idle. Two other games were played, however, and they saw Columbus edge Louisville, 3 to 2 and St. Paul take a slugfest from Toledo, 13 to 12. Other games for today take Louisville to Milwaukee and Toledo to St. Paul.

THE HEROES AND THE GOATS

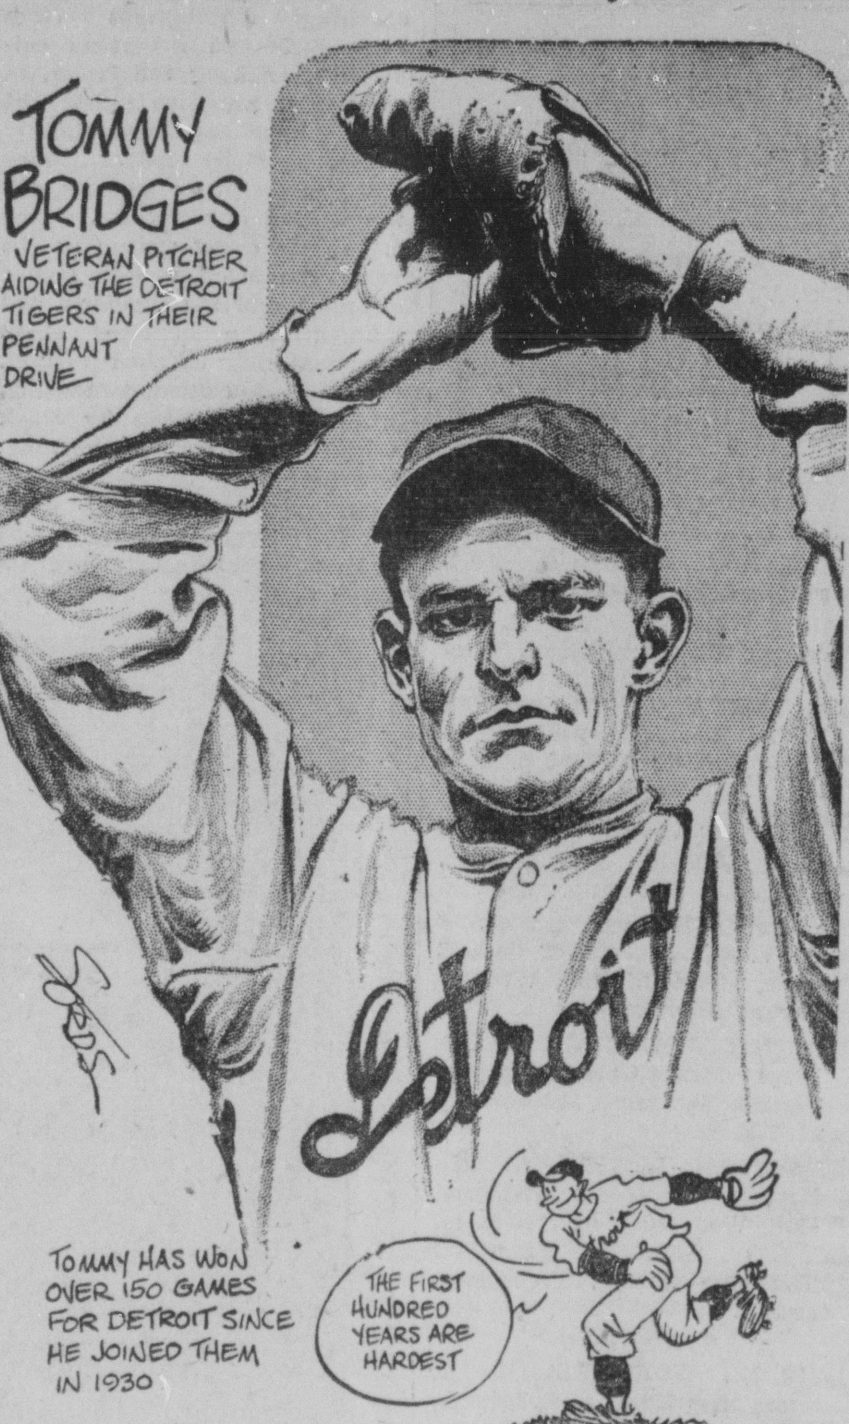

HEROES—Billy Jurgens, New York shortstop, who hit a homer and scored another run as the Giants defeated his ex-teammates, the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1; Clyde Shoun, an overworked St. Louis relief pitcher who, in his first starting assignment, turned back the Brooklyn Dodgers with four safeties.

GOATS—Cookie Lavagetto, Brooklyn third baseman, whose error, one of four committed by the Dodgers yesterday, paved the way for the winning St. Louis run; Johnny Lanning, Pittsburgh pitcher, whose wildness in relief gave the Boston Bees a verdict over the Pirates in the first game of a doubleheader.

HOME RUN LEADERS

TIGER VETERAN By Jack Sords

Godoy May Stay With Champ By Clowning, But Not By Fighting

NEW YORK, June 18—Has Arturo Godoy actually got a chance to defeat Joe Louis for the world heavyweight championship on Thursday night, or is the match precisely what it appears to be—an exhibition between a great but easily befuddled title-holder and a clown who can hope only to survive the 15 rounds? Whatever your answer may be, we will offer this size up of the situation based on what we could gather today in a whirl through the local cauliflower patches: Because he is unorthodox, tough, game and went the limit with Louis last February, Godoy must be given at least an outside chance to do it again. But if he wins, then you may as well throw everything out of the window that even looks like a pugilistic form sheet. It all comes down to this (we were told at some length): if Godoy opens up with any kind of a bid for a winning fight he will be hit hard and repeatedly and with sufficient finality unto the occasion thereof. In other words, he can clown his way through the 15 rounds, but he can't fight his way through them. Godoy can smother Louis' punches and keep the champion off balance with his nonsense, but he can't let himself get set for a punch and even if he were to crank up and let fly he couldn't muster enough power to do any damage. It is all very technical, you see, but that is the way people who know all about these things view the forthcoming encore to February's fox trot in waltz time. The betting odds concur with the foregoing all along the line. The latest quotations show Louis favored at 5 to 1, with 3 to 1 that he scores a knockout, even money that he does it before six rounds have elapsed and 9 to 5 that the thing doesn't go 10.

We personally don't think that any fighter could have escaped a knockout against Louis as he fought Max Schmeling in their second engagement after Schmeling had flattened Louis in their previous encounter. Louis had Schmeling whipped that night before the latter could get his hands up, and he may try the same thing with the Chilean. Godoy took Louis' punches in their other bout, but not the kind of punches Louis can throw if he can get a clean shot at exactly the right distance, when he is in there blazing away, instead of just stalking through the thing like a man in a daze.

WESTERN STARS TAKE BIG TEN ACES AGAIN

CHICAGO, June 18—If the brand of track and field athletics displayed in the Middlewest is not improving, it at least is not showing any definite signs of getting poorer. That is about the only consolation the Western Conference can derive today from its fourth annual dual meet with the Pacific Coast conference, staged last night in Dyche Stadium at Northwestern University, which the coast stars won, 96 to 40.

Last night's efforts by the Big Ten, although being relegated as of habit to the futile category, paralleled in results the meets of 1937-38-39, in which the scores were 92-44, 101-35 and 94 to 36% in favor of the coast.

GOATS—Cookie Lavagetto, Brooklyn third baseman, whose error, one of four committed by the Dodgers yesterday, paved the way for the winning St. Louis run; Johnny Lanning, Pittsburgh pitcher, whose wildness in relief gave the Boston Bees a verdict over the Pirates in the first game of a doubleheader.

WHITEY MOORE IN PERFECT JOB IN RELIEF ROLE

Cincinnati Problem Child Halts Phillies After Vander Meer Falts

FIRST PLACE REGAINED

Bucky Walters Takes Hill Tonight; Paul Dean On Top In Another

PHILADELPHIA, June 18—A superb bit of relief hurling on the part of Lloyd "Whitey" Moore today put the Cincinnati Reds back in first place in the National League pennant race.

Whitey relieved Johnny Vander Meer on the mound in the second inning of the Reds game with the Philadelphia Phils yesterday and allowed the cellar occupants only two safe blows, both singles, from there on out. Cincinnati won the game, 6 to 2.

Two men were on base by virtue of walks when Moore took over the hurling duties. The Phils had scored two runs but never came close to scoring again. It was Whitey's second win of the season—both against Philadelphia.

The win put the Reds on top of the league and a full game ahead of Brooklyn.

Bucky Walters, who has lost three straight games after winning nine in a row, was to take the mound for Cincinnati today in an attempt to get back in winning form.

NEW YORK, June 18—Events continue as they have been thus far this season, 1940 will go down in the baseball record books as a "comeback" year for supposedly washed up pitchers.

First, Schoolboy Rowe, after a few lean years, returned to form to become once again a starting pitcher for the Detroit Tigers. To date, the lanky right-hander, who was shipped to the minors in 1938, has a record of four wins against no losses.

Then, Tex Carleton, resurrected this year from baseball's limbo, astounded the critics by pitching

RED BIRDS VISIT TWIN CITIES IN SWING TO WEST

COLUMBUS, June 18—Eastern clubs of the American Association invaded the fair of Western teams today and the Minneapolis Millers had a chance to gain first place in the league pennant race.

If the Millers can win from Columbus while Indianapolis is defeating Kansas City, they will hold a half-game advantage—the same now held by Kansas City.

The Millers won from Milwaukee, 9 to 6, yesterday while the Blues were idle. Two other games were played, however, and they saw Columbus edge Louisville, 3 to 2 and St. Paul take a slugfest from Toledo, 13 to 12.

Other games for today take Louisville to Milwaukee and Toledo to St. Paul.

Godoy May Stay With Champ By Clowning, But Not By Fighting

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, June 18—Has Arturo Godoy actually got a chance to defeat Joe Louis for the world heavyweight championship on Thursday night, or is the match precisely what it appears to be—an exhibition between a great but easily befuddled title-holder and a clown who can hope only to survive the 15 rounds? Whatever your answer may be, we will offer this size up of the situation based on what we could gather today in a whirl through the local cauliflower patches:

Because he is unorthodox, tough, game and went the limit with Louis last February, Godoy must be given at least an outside chance to do it again. But if he wins, then you may as well throw everything out of the window that even looks like a pugilistic form sheet. It all comes down to this (we were told at some length): if Godoy opens up with any kind of a bid for a winning fight he will be hit hard and repeatedly and with sufficient finality unto the occasion thereof.

In other words, he can clown his way through the 15 rounds, but he can't fight his way through them. Godoy can smother Louis' punches and keep the champion off balance with his nonsense, but he can't let himself get set for a punch and even if he were to crank up and let fly he couldn't muster enough power to do any damage.

It is all very technical, you see, but that is the way people who know all about these things view the forthcoming encore to February's fox trot in waltz time.

The betting odds concur with the foregoing all along the line. The latest quotations show Louis favored at 5 to 1, with 3 to 1 that he scores a knockout, even money that he does it before six rounds have elapsed and 9 to 5 that the thing doesn't go 10.

We personally don't think that any fighter could have escaped a knockout against Louis as he fought Max Schmeling in their second engagement after Schmeling had flattened Louis in their previous encounter. Louis had Schmeling whipped that night before the latter could get his hands up, and he may try the same thing with the Chilean.

Godoy took Louis' punches in their other bout, but not the kind of punches Louis can throw if he can get a clean shot at exactly the right distance, when he is in there blazing away, instead of just stalling through the thing like a man in a daze.

WESTERN STARS TAKE BIG TEN ACES AGAIN
 CHICAGO, June 18—If the brand of track and field athletics displayed in the Midwest is not improving, it is at least not showing any definite signs of getting poorer.

That is about the only consolation the Western Conference can derive today from its fourth annual dual meet with the Pacific Coast conference, staged last night in Dwyer Stadium at Northwestern University, which the coast stars won, 96 to 40.

Last night's efforts by the Big Ten, although being relegated as of habit to the futile category, paralleled in results the meets of 1937-38-39, in which the scores were 92-44, 101-35 and 94 to 36% in favor of the coast.

WHITEY MOORE IN PERFECT JOE IN RELIEF ROLE

Cincinnati Problem Child Halts Phillies After Vander Meer Falts

FIRST PLACE REGAINED

Bucky Walters Takes Hill Tonight; Paul Dean On Top In Another

PHILADELPHIA, June 18—A superb bit of relief hurling on the part of Lloyd "Whitey" Moore today put the Cincinnati Reds back in first place in the National League pennant race.

Whitey relieved Johnny Vander Meer on the mound in the second inning of the Reds game with the Philadelphia Phils yesterday and allowed the cellar occupants only two safe blows, both singles, from there on out. Cincinnati won the game, 6 to 2.

Two men were on base by virtue of walks when Moore took over the hurling duties. The Phils had scored two runs but never came close to scoring again. It was Whitey's second win of the season—both against Philadelphia.

The win put the Reds on top of the league and a full game ahead of Brooklyn.

Bucky Walters, who has lost three straight games after winning nine in a row, was to take the mound for Cincinnati today in an attempt to get back in winning form.

NEW YORK, June 18—If events continue as they have been thus far this season, 1940 will go down in the baseball record books as a "comeback" year for supposedly washed up pitchers.

First, Schoolboy Rowe, after a few lean years, returned to form to become once again a starting pitcher for the Detroit Tigers. To date, the lanky right-hander, who was shipped to the minors in 1938, has a record of four wins against no losses.

Then, Tex Carleton, resurrected this year from baseball's limbo, astounded the critics by pitching a no-hitter against the Cincinnati Reds, a feat which has assured him a starting job with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Now it is Paul Dean, one-half of the famous "Me and Paul" combination which almost double-handedly pitched the famous Gas House gang from St. Louis to the pennant, in 1934, who has hit the comeback trail. The "Me" in the "Me and Paul" combination is, of course, Dizzy Dean, now pitching for Tulsa in the Texas League.

In 1938 Paul was shipped by the Cards to the minors and the word was passed around that he was through. He promptly was forgotten until this spring when Col. William Terry, manager of the New York Giants drafted him from Columbus in the American Association.

Yesterday brother Paul won his second start for the aggressive New York Giants by pitting a six-hit game against the Chicago Cubs. Bill Jurgens, a former Cub, helped the quiet right-hander gain a 2 to 1 verdict by scoring both the Giants runs, one of which was a homer. In his other start, the younger Dean allowed only four safeties.

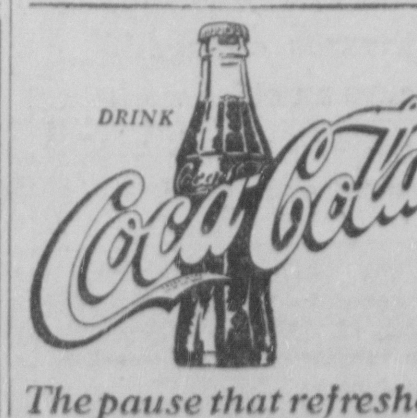

Four errors and the four hit pitching of Clyde Shoun, an overworked relief hurler, caused the Dodgers' third straight downfall. It was the Red Birds' fifth consecutive win under the leadership of Billy Southworth, who succeeded Ray Blades as manager.

FIGHT CARD DELAYED
 COLUMBUS, June 18—Jack "Buddy" Walker, undefeated Columbus Negro heavyweight and Jack Woffard, of Texas, will try again tonight to box in their scheduled 10-round match. Rain caused postponement of last night's open air card.

100 Officers, Men From Circleville, To Leave August 11

The Norfolk and Western Railway and 26 other major railroads are cooperating with the Second Army transportation officers in moving approximately 34,000 regular and national guardsmen from seven states to Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, where the Second Army will be mobilized on the 500 square-mile maneuver area August 11 to August 31.

The Norfolk and Western will participate in the concentration of troops by transporting nearly 400 officers and men.

From Bluefield and Welch, W. Va., Batavia and Ironton, Ohio, the N. & W. will move 293 officers and men in a special train consisting of five passenger coaches, four baggage cars and one combination car. The ten-car special is scheduled to leave Bluefield at 8 a. m., August 11.

One hundred officers and men from Circleville and Chillicothe will travel on N. & W. train No. 35. The men will leave Circleville on August 11, and Chillicothe on August 12.

States represented in the mass movement are Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Rail movement, in addition to personnel to be transported by the railroads, includes approximately 1,200 tons of national guard equipment. From Fort Knox, Ky., 179 combat cars, prime movers for 75 mm. howitzers and half truck ambulances will be moved by rail. Tank companies in the four national guard divisions participating also will be moved by the railroads. From 312 separate stations, about 78 regular and special trains will be formed at rail centers. Field kitchens will be set up in a number of baggage cars, eliminating stops for meals en route.

LOCKER STORAGE PLAN BOOSTED AT CONFERENCE

Plans for a locker storage plant, where Pickaway County farmers and Circleville folk may store quantities of meat, fruits and vegetables, are now being made, and before the summer is over such a plant may be in operation.

The announcement was made before a group of farmers and other interested persons at a meeting in the Farm Bureau office Monday night, by T. D. Harman, a publisher of the Ohio Farmer, and director of the project. He stated that in order to sponsor the project, a new company will be organized and stock sold. He told the group that he believed a locker plant with 400 individual lockers each capable of storing between 250 and 300 pounds of perishable foodstuffs could be installed in Pickaway County for about $10,000.

V. R. Desbard and H. A. Voskamp, representatives from the Armstrong Cork Company, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, were at the meeting and demonstrated by motion pictures the value of a locker storage plant to the community.

When Circleville farmers bring their meat to the plant it will first be put in an aging room to cool. From the aging room it will go to a processing room, where an expert butcher will cut up the meat and wrap it in a special wax paper to keep it from drying out. This processing will cost between 1½ and 2 cents a pound, it is believed.

From the processing room the meat will be taken to a sharp freezer where, at a temperature of 20 degrees below zero, the meat will be frozen quickly to preserve its texture and flavor before being placed in the individual lockers.

A locker will rent for about $12 or $15 a year.

COL. Charles A. Lindbergh is pictured as he warned America over the radio that "some of your representatives in Washington are considering a declaration of war" and that "the U. Hoover's "Form Sheet"

Here's the way intimates of Herbert Hoover say he is doing the GOP presidential derby:

Best starting chance to win — Senator Bob Taft

Leading dark horse — Wendell Willkie

Best long shot—Hoover.

The ex-President, who long has nursed an ambition to come back, believes that the war crisis has greatly improved his chances. He is the only Republican candidate who has had experience in the executive branch of the Government, and this, plus his World War European background, Hoover thinks, make him particularly fitted to run for the presidency at this time.

Also, Hoover is convinced that time has dissipated much of the popular resentment against his ill-starred Administration. His mail has increased greatly in recent weeks and many one-time supporters are active for him again.

Taft is Hoover's first choice after himself because their economic views are similar. Taft also was a member of Hoover's Food Administration. Nevertheless Hoover doesn't consider him a strong standard bearer under present conditions.

Friends predict that if he finds he has no chance, and if Taft peters out, then Willkie is next on his list. The utility magnate has the zip and personality Hoover thinks are needed to oppose Roosevelt—who he is certain will run.

Note — It is significant that while Willkie has panned some Old Guard GOP leaders, such as Pennsylvania boss Joe Pew, he has carefully avoided saying anything about Hoover. One of Willkie's biggest obstacles is the hostility of Republican congressional leaders who view his utility and J. P. Morgan background as political poison for state and local tickets.

The plant to have facilities for smoking meat and rendering lard. Employees of the plant will, on request, butcher hogs and cattle on the farms. To butcher a hog will cost about $1.50 and cattle between $2.50 and $3 per head, depending on the size.

Besides meat, including poultry and fish, fruits and vegetables may be stored in the lockers.

There are 40 such plants now in Ohio.

The village council was in session Monday evening with all members present. Bills were paid amounting to $1296.77. A large part of this amount was for material in the construction of the East Lawn sewer which is now completed. A resolution was passed certifying to the county auditor the amount of $30,000, the estimate of the amount required for the construction of municipal building with auditorium including site and fixtures. Marion Martin was employed to paint on the roof of the park shelter house the word "Ashville" for the benefit of plane fliers.

The Grove City board of education at a recent meeting in a field of near sixty applicants chose Barton Griffith as its superintendent of schools for a term of three years. This named school ranks in the A grade with about 300 pupils in the high school.

Mr. Griffith is a local boy, graduating from the high school in the class of 1911, D. L. Hines, superintendent. He has been in charge of the Bay Village schools for about fifteen years.

The local high school board at its meeting Monday transacted no business except the paying of bills. Because of the absence of one member, no teacher was employed for the place made vacant by the resignation of Prof. E. F. Martin. There are several applicants.

KIWANIANS ENJOY MOVIES SHOWN BY FORD CO. MEN

Circleville Kiwanians enjoyed motion pictures shown by Joe Vaughn and William Gale of Cincinnati, employees of the Ford Motor Co., at the Pickaway Country Club Monday evening. The Ford men were brought to Circleville by Myron M. Wallace of the Pickaway Sales and Service.

The movies included a trip to the World Fair in New York, a travel picture and a film concerning the Ford plant.

The Rotary Club will play softball against the Kiwanians next Monday evening, ladies of both clubs being invited to a buffet supper following the game.
